Please toughen the Children's Television Act. Our children are being subjected to too much garbage on TV. It is really difficult for a parent to know what a child is watching. Parent's have to work and we cant always review what are children are watching. the government needs to help Americas parent's.

Dear M. Secretary:

1. The research on violence on TV and its relation to children's behavior and the large number of children in elementary school who watch "R" rated movies and adult TV programs makes it imperative that there be some control over the broadcast of violent and sexually explicit shows.
2. The lack of strong children's programming makes it just as imperative that networks provide more hours of children's TV.
3. Giving parents the tools to monitor their kids TV watching through "V" chips or other means.

Anything that can lead to these ends is needed.

Sincerely,
Charles Schiller

Dear Mr. Reed Hundt

My instructor Dr. Tom Seymour of my telecommunications class advised us to find out how to get on the FCC mailing list. He went through the newsletter that was recently sent to him in our class. I found it to be very interesting. I agree that there is too much violence and dirty scenes in the movies and cartoons.

Dear Sir/Madam,

DOCKET FILE COPY ORIGINAL

As a producer of television here in the Midwest and proponent of free-speech, I am, nevertheless, compelled to insist that the Children's Television Act be strengthened.

We broadcasters have not been serving the public — much less children — with so much of the violent and sexual images we use to sell Nintendo, Budweiser, and Calvin Klein jeans. I say this as a liberal. Of course, more people do not complain about this because young children are not aware of the more responsible and dignified programming that was once available. Not only should we impose regulation, programs such as NYPD BLUE WHICH WOULD BE RATED R IF SHOWN IN A MOVIE THEATRE must be taken off the air. Television is a public medium. It does not matter whether a corporate sponsor will back an obscene adult program or a cartoon that cross-promotes a line of expensive children's toys (such that the cartoon's stars are made up of those very characters). Financial backing ≠ acceptability.

I am proud to be an American, born and raised here. But when I look at the television that most of us produce, I feel both insulted as a viewer and ashamed of what other countries must think of us.

Presidents Nixon, Ford, and Carter were right: regulation is the only way that many of my irresponsible peers understand the need to consider the children of our great nation.

Sincerely, I urge you to take a proactive, leadership role in this issue. I, and others, will be standing beside you.

THANKS! - J. Johar Husain
